

About CEGL

The Center for Emerging Global Leaders (CEGL) promotes service-oriented leadership through hands-on experience in international affairs and diplomacy. CEGL prepares students and young professionals for careers in diplomacy, international relations, and public service through practical training, mentorship, and professional development.

CEGL's flagship initiative - the Diplomatic Innovation Project Fellowship - prepares students and young professionals to apply core leadership skills and innovation to serve the greater common good. This year, 20 Fellows from 15 universities are researching the nexus of AI and diplomacy and learning from experienced professionals from around the world through training and mentorship opportunities.

Why Partner With Us

When you partner with CEGL, you invest in future leaders who are committed to tackling global challenges and serving their communities.

Support for CEGL provides:

Early access to a vetted talent pool. CEGL brings together high-performing students and young professionals committed to public service and international affairs, allowing partners to engage potential interns and full-time staff before they enter formal recruiting pipelines.

A team of researchers eager to learn. Through the Diplomatic Innovation Project Fellowship, CEGL can provide partners with researchers curious about addressing emerging policy challenges to examine partners' areas of interest.

Impactful CSR opportunities. CEGL strengthens the leadership skills of Fellows through training, programming, and mentorship - giving partners a meaningful way to invest in emerging leaders committed to serving the greater common good.

Ways to Partner

CEGL works with organizations, institutions, and businesses to develop tailored, mutually beneficial partnerships, including through:

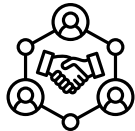

Financial support. Through both one-time and recurring contributions, funds enable CEGL to:

- Host in-person events, workshops, and networking opportunities that connect Fellows with leaders across the public and private sectors;
- Provide stipends for future Fellows, ensuring they are fairly compensated for their effort and dedication; and
- Cover initial start-up expenses and operational costs of future growth.

Research opportunities

- Partners can sponsor a one-time research opportunity for an individual Fellow or a group, culminating in a polished research product and presentation.
- Partners can also create a named fellowship, a recurring opportunity for dedicated research projects and a resulting internship placement for a Fellow(s) following the fellowship's conclusion.

Professional development support

- Guarantee placement or preferential consideration of Fellows for internships in your organization.
- Partners can also host in-person and virtual tours and speak with Fellows about your institution's mission, work, and career pathways.

Pro bono support

- Professional legal, financial, and promotional assistance can benefit CEGL in preparing MOUs, navigating organizational administration and tax requirements, and strengthening awareness of the organization.
- CEGL also welcomes a venue in the Washington, D.C. area to host events and trainings.
